URBAN STUDIES IN GEOGRAPHY: A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF DISSERTATIONS AND THESES IN GEOGRAPHY, 1960 - 1970

Dr. William W. Ray
Assistant Professor of Geography
Northern Arizona University

INTRODUCTION

The breadth of geographic inquiry is well suited to the analysis of cities and areas that are sufficiently urban-like in population density and land-use characteristics. While the urban geographer's primary focus centers on the spatial aspects of urbanism, the manner in which the city is studied differs significantly. Consequently, the variety of urban topics investigated by the geographer is limitless. The city may be (1) viewed as a part of the fabric of settlement, (2) approached as an economic phenomenon with parallel social and political qualities, (3) examined for the purpose of developing concepts regarding urban growth, location, or character, or (4) studied in order to contribute to the solution of certain problems relating to planning. The particular orientation of the geographer with the associative complexities of the urban area has resulted in the development of a distinct and valuable perspective within the field of urbanism.

The following bibliography reflects the broad interests and capabilities of the urban geographer. Even though the listings are limited to dissertations and theses, the titles have utility as a measurement of past, current, and future attitudes, within geography, toward urban studies. The bibliography is divided into two sections, Part I includes doctoral dissertations and Part II contains theses. With few exceptions, the dissertations and theses are readily available through interlibrary loan, University Microfilms, or the individual department.
